Alberta Beef Producers... Calgary AB:

Alberta direct cattle sales so far this week have seen light trade develop with dressed sales ranging from $493.00-495.00/cwt delivered, $2.00-10.00/cwt lower than the previous week. Cattle that traded were being scheduled for delivery throughout the month of December. In some instances, cattle were bought flat with no heavy weight carcass discounts. There have been reports packers are behind schedule picking up cash cattle and contract cattle. From their highs in September, fed cattle prices have dropped $22.00/cwt.

3 Year Bullish/Bearish Consensus Charts from Sentimentrader:

The theory behind the "Bullish/Bearish Consensus" indicator is when the public reaches a consensus, they are usually wrong:

- They get too bullish after prices have risen and too bearish after they have already fallen.

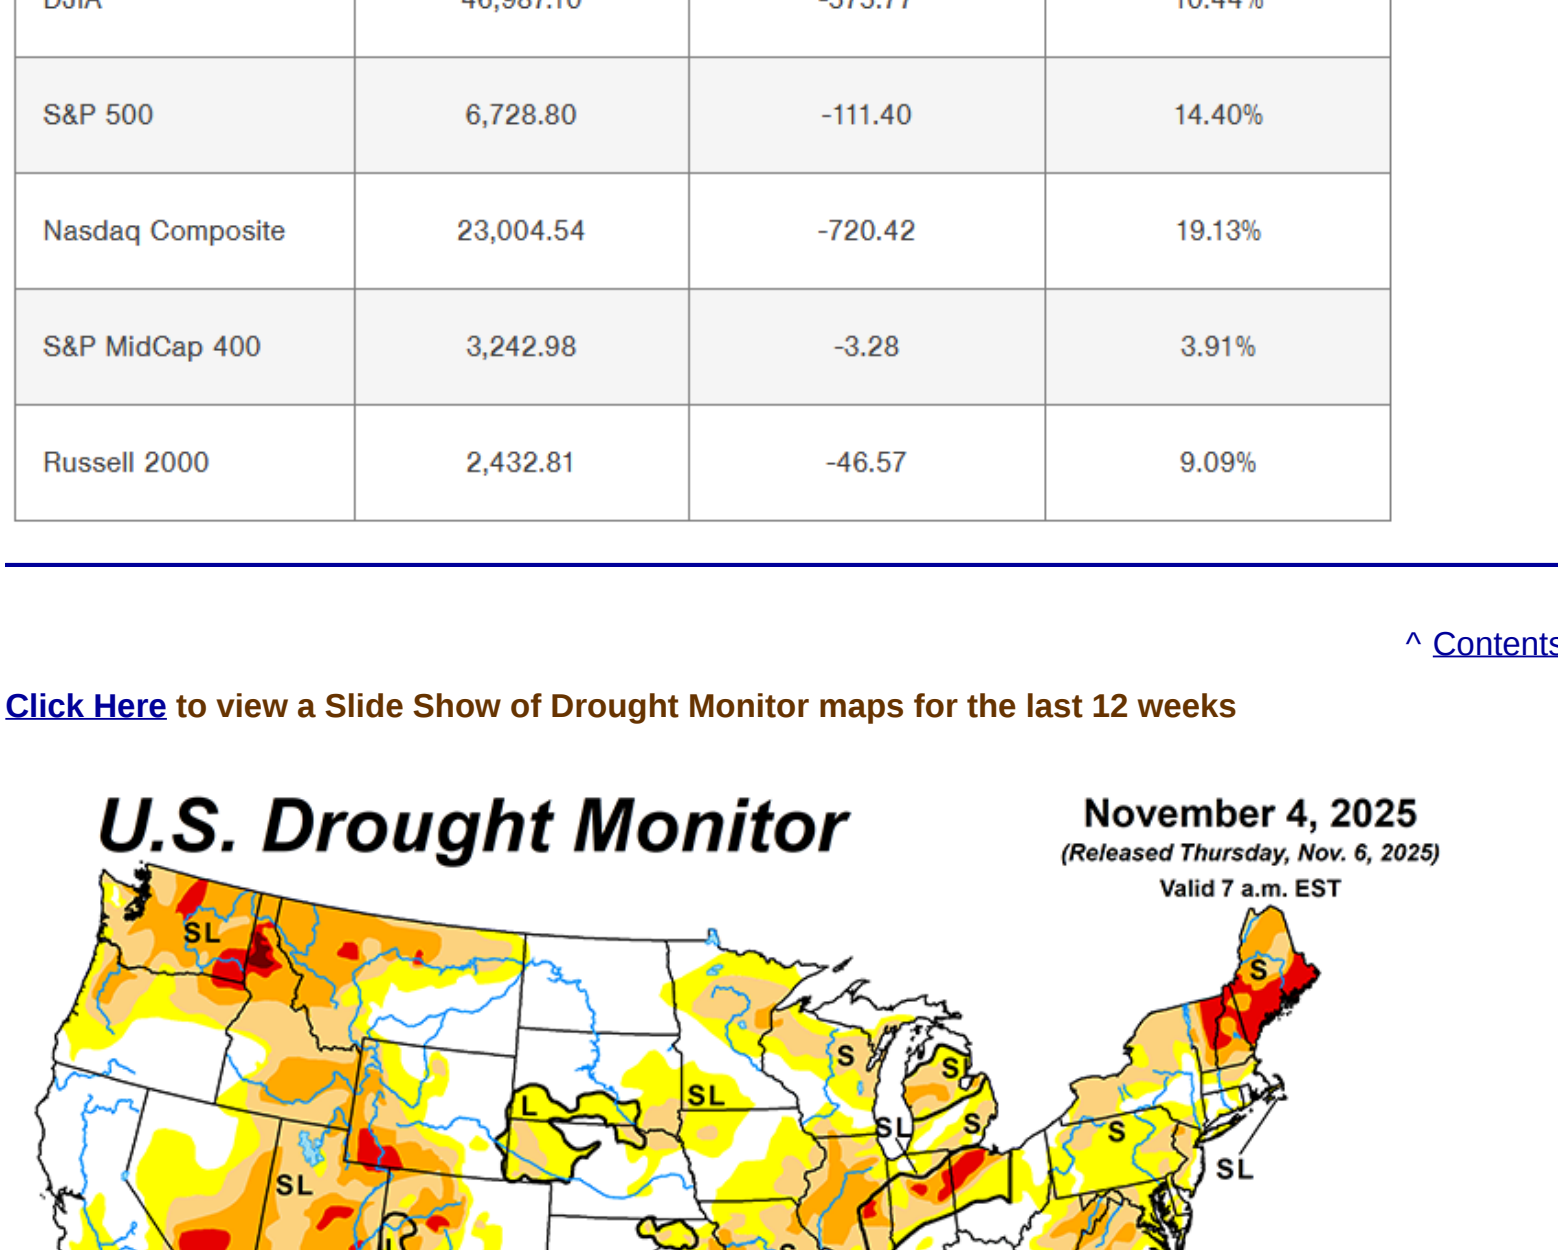

Because of this tendency, there are often extremes in opinion right before major changes in trend:

- When the public reaches a bullish extreme, i.e., a great majority thinks prices will keep rising, then prices often decline instead.
- And when they become too bearish, then prices tend to rise.

So when Public Opinion moves above the red dotted line in the chart, it means that compared to other readings over the past year, you're seeing excessive optimism. You also want to look at the absolute level of Opinion, too - if it's at 90%, then there's no question we're seeing an historic level of bullish opinion. Watch for readings above 80% (or especially 90%) to spot those dangerous times when the public is overly enthusiastic about a commodity.

Conversely, when Public Opinion moves below the green dotted line, then the public is excessively pessimistic about the commodity's prospects for further gains compared to their opinion over the past year. Looking for absolute readings under 20% (or especially 10%) often indicates an upturn in the market.

Stocks snap three-week winning streak amid tech sell-off

U.S. equity indexes finished the week lower, as concerns regarding elevated valuations and increased scrutiny around artificial intelligence (AI) spending weighed on many of the growth-oriented stocks that have driven indexes' rapid rise since early April. The technology-heavy Nasdaq Composite led major indexes lower, while the Russell 1000 Growth Index underperformed its value counterpart by 288 basis points (2.88 percentage points), the widest margin since February.

The U.S. federal government shutdown reached the longest on record during the week, which also appeared to weigh on broader sentiment. While headlines over the past few weeks have seemingly done little to impact investor sentiment, coverage around the effects of the shutdown seemed to pick up during the week, highlighted by news that the Federal Aviation Administration would be ordering airlines to reduce flight traffic amid air traffic controller staffing concerns. Worries about the continuing lack of government data and the potential impact of the shutdown on gross domestic product growth also rose.

October layoffs highest in over 20 years

With the ongoing shutdown continuing to limit government data releases, investors focused on several reports from alternative private-sector sources during the week, including ADP's October employment report. On Wednesday, the private payroll processing firm reported that private employers added 42,000 jobs during the month, rebounding after two consecutive months of declines. However, the report also noted that hiring was not broad-based as employers in the professional business services, information, and leisure and hospitality industries shed jobs for the third month in a row, while pay growth was unchanged.

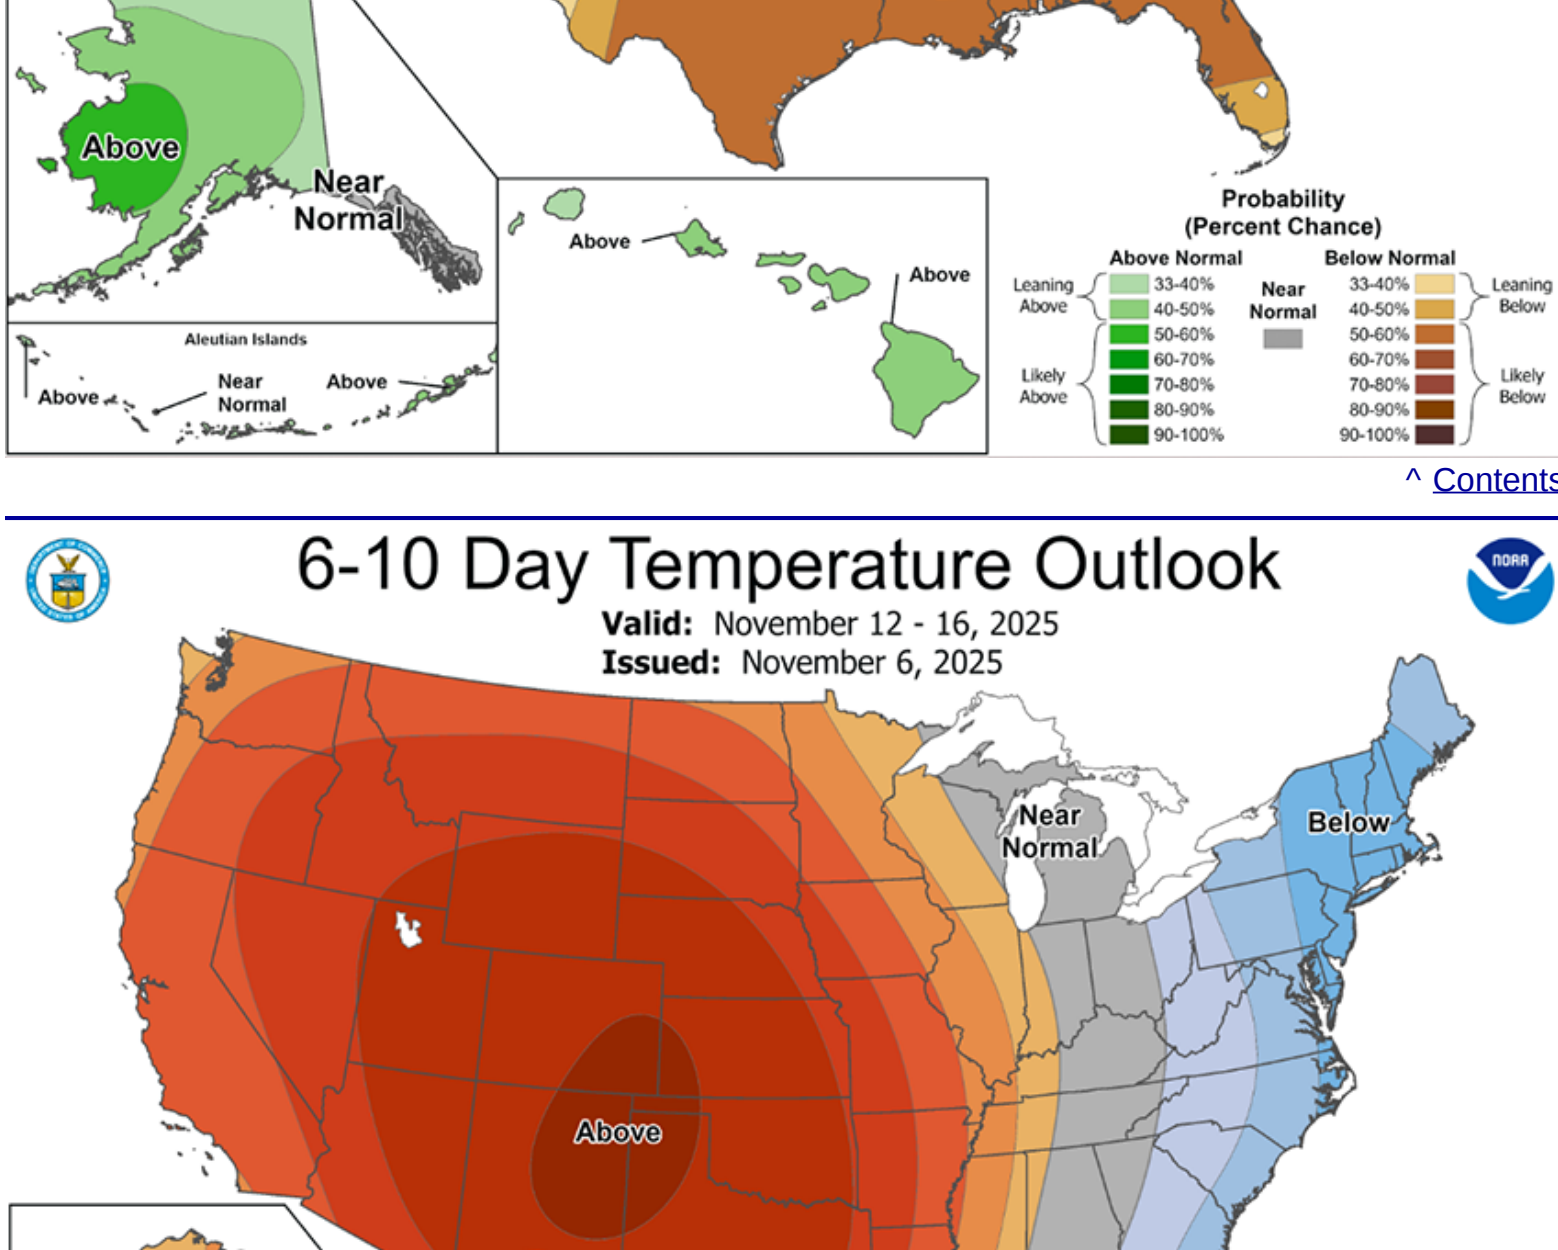

Meanwhile, a report released Thursday from consulting firm Challenger, Gray & Christmas indicated that employers have cut nearly 1.1 million jobs this year through October, a 65% increase over the same period last year and a 44% jump from the number of job cuts in the entirety of 2024. October's 153,074 job cuts were the most for the month since 2003.
